Office 2010 activator free no activatorQ: Is it possible to prevent any sort of finger printing from being left on a glass surface? To make things easy, I have glass surfaces which I am attempting to process in my computer (namely my CPU die). Because of the nature of my work, I am disinfecting the surfaces prior to processing them. Unfortunately, my handle tends to leave a rather large amount of sweat on the surfaces, and I can imagine that the process of drying them may leave a fingerprint. What is an efficient and effective way to prevent any sort of fingerprint from being left on the surfaces before processing? Note: I'm not asking about anti-fingerprint products. I'm trying to prevent a fingerprint from ever being formed in the first place. A: Look at the surfaces and see if it's possible to avoid touching them with your hand. If you need to touch them to set up a part, use an appropriately sized brush or something else to do the work. I've seen this sort of thing before with knives. A good sharp knife can remove fingerprints quickly. A: I think that you need to first disinform yourself that you may leave a fingerprint on glass. Depending on the surfaces: alcohol, a few quick blasts from a Shop Vac, or compressed air. I think that a multi-step process of 100% is mostly brute force, though. I read somewhere that a seemingly un-finger-printable material is stainless steel. Looks like surface engineers all use Nikwax surface wipes for their initial protection. package org.robotframework.ide.eclipse.main.plugin.project.editor.build; import
